Title

Putting the Brain Back in the Body: An integrated model for treating mental illness

Speaker

Raymond J. Kotwicki, MD, MPH
Chief Medical Officer at Skyland Trail

Objectives

At the end of the program each participant will be able to:

1. Discuss a model for the development of mental illnesses, using the stress-diathesis theory
2. Explain the roles of transcription, translation, and epigenes in the genetic expression of diseases
3. Explain the overlap between the signs and symptoms of major mental illness and “sickness behaviors” that are associated with medical illnesses like infections
4. Identify the research results of a model wellness intervention aimed at reducing cardio-metabolic risk associated with psychotropic medications

Target Audience

Physicians, psychologists, social workers, nurses, and mental health professionals.

CMEs and CEUs offered. No fee. Check in at Welcome Center. Free parking.
